FLOOR DEBATE

February 26, 2002 LB 600

SENATOR COORDSEN: ...that no one pays anything, that I'm aware of, on the retirement plans, on their other investments, on their income, because that's where all money has to come from at some point in time to pay all of the expenses, from somebody's income, and we are, in fact, paying on a valuation base that more nearly reflects someone else's income than it does our own. We have heard members get up and talk about selling unimproved land next to urban areas for tremendous prices per acre, then to avoid income tax going out into the rural areas and buying farmland for whatever it took, whatever it took, to own that land in order to save the capital gains tax they would ordinarily earn. Those are arm's-length sales, those are sales for agricultural purposes, and those are sales that impact the taxable valuation of the property of all of those...

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Time.

SENATOR COORDSEN: ...in that community who don't have that opportunity. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator Dierks. Senator Dierks.

SENATOR DIERKS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Members of the Legislature, I have to respond to some of the remarks that Senator Chambers made. He knows, and I know that he knows, that there are family farms that are successful, and they're successful whether they have...without having subsidies paid to them. If we have difficulties in family farms and ranches today because of production, or a lack of profit, that lack of profit is not because of something that those family farmers have done. That lack of profit is probably because of something corporate America has done. And we have this before us, we've had it before us for years, it becomes more onerous every year. We have been asked to do things like provide a...to provide...a...the words escape me right now, but they want us to do things in agriculture to enhance what we have, to enhance the value of...value added is what I'm trying to say. They want us to...they want us to enhance the quality of our beef and the quality of hogs, they want us to add value to the corn that we raise, and we do that by feeding it in a...in a method that will
